

DON'T SWEAT THE DETAILS

A Science Play

By David Quang Pham

Contact:

616 818 5413

davidquangpham@outlook.com

512 W 158th St #2 New York, New York 10032

PLOT SUMMARY

At Bruce Peninsula National Park, a pair of friends hike the Niagara Escarpment to clear their minds. Brooke is a geomorphologist who studies sand dunes in Michigan. Jordan is a New York-based exercise physiologist. As they inch closer to the escarpment, Brooke and Jordan get under each other's skins, respectively digging deep into each other's porosity and pores.

As a minor, Brooke suffered from alcohol use disorder. They once drove under the influence after partying as a high school senior at Sauble Beach where they crashed into the dune. Jordan struggled from childhood obesity. They met during their undergraduate education at Northern Michigan University.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

BROOKE, a geomorphologist in their 20s–30s

JORDAN, an exercise physiologist in their 20s–30s