

PAST,
PRESENT, FUTURE

Trapped in the 19th-century Romantic era by guitars carved from spacetime wood, a 1st-century Galilean lyre maker and a lonely 21st-century Midwesterner must blend ancient hymns with hip hop to survive a tyrannical cosmic orchestra and find their way home.

WHY (THEN) NOW (LATER)?

Instruments are History's Greatest Anchors

Music is a physical, living essence. By centering the musical on what's tangible like ancient ouds and modern guitars, it explores craftsmanship and how it carves history, culture, and memory.

A Celebration of Cultural Roots

By blending ancient hymns with modern music like hip hop and rock, the musical honors the global ancestry of music. It acts as a universal reminder that our past artistic roots are essential to shaping our collective future. The story values memory.

The Power of Shared Sound

At its heart, this show explores how music transcends generational rifts to create swift community. When characters from vastly different millennia unite through song, it reminds audiences that communal harmony is our greatest tool to survive our fractured world.

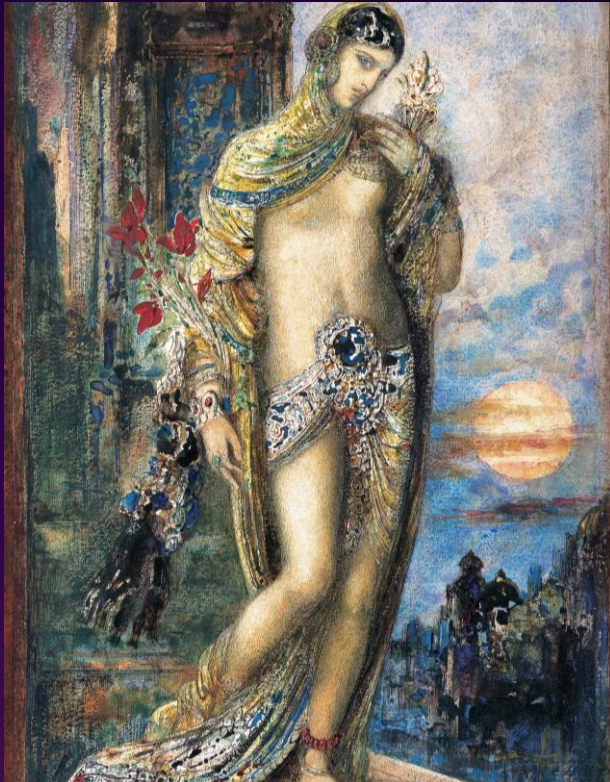

MEET ¡TAB & CODA!

Past, Present, Future is a musical adventure romance that follows Tabitha and Dakota, lonely musicians respectively from the 1st Century Middle East and 21st Century Midwest whose guitars carved from spacetime wood trap them in the 19th Century Romantic era. To get home, they must form the duo ¡Tab & Coda! and survive the ensuing Timeharmonic Orchestra, while becoming the right people at the wrong time.

It explores bittersweet themes like mortality, an appreciation for wisdom, an everlasting search for freshness, and the value of nature in music.

TABITHA

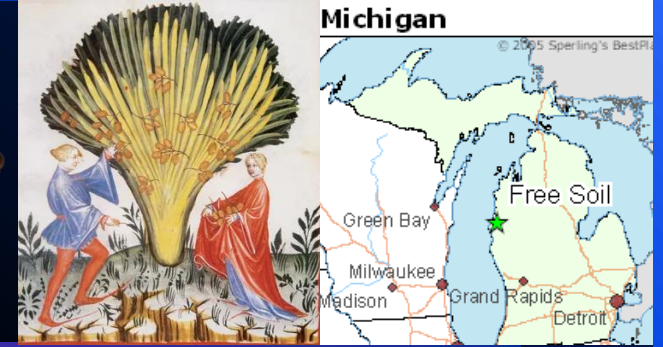

TABITHA is a lyre maker from 1st Century Galilee who is way ahead of her time and in over her head. She seeks that “new sound.” Destiny, the Timepiper of the Future, gifts her American basswood which she uses to build her oud that sends her into the future. Tab finds home in alternative hip hop. As a singer, she is a breath of fresh air to what music could be.

DAKOTA

DAKOTA is a guitar maker from 21st Century Free Soil, Michigan who is behind the times. They honor the “oldies.” Frailty, the Timepiper of the Past, gifts them Judean date palm seeds for their guitar, which sends them back in time. Kota finds home in psalmody. As a guitarist, they are an old soul showing what music once was, never staying up to date on the mainstream.

A fun song that may inspire "Life is Short (You Must Be This Old to Die)."

"Crunch" – ELLIPSES (4:30)

Eternity and the Timepipers embody pentatonic Asian sensibilities. This may inspire the sound of the feature love song, "In Loving Destiny."

An encouraging song that may inspire "Keep Tabs (on Your Heart)."

"Cutting Edge" – ELLIPSES (6:29)

Who made time... time Memory... memory
What makes music... music? Love... love?

David's intention for Past, Present, Future is to express the value of music and instruments on time and community; how they shaped history.

The idea of time-traveling guitars came upon observing the makings of guitar phím lữ in Vietnam and fado guitar in Portugal. Watching birds drop objects inspired spacetime botany.

SCENIC DESIGN & CHOREOGRAPHY

Spacetime Split (1st-19th-21st Century)

The stage contain multitudes of contrast. 1st-century Galilee and 21st-century Michigan are defined by rustic and organic materials (American basswood, Judean date palm seeds, raw timber). These dissolve into the lavish and structured architecture of the 19th-century Romantic era.

The Orchestra Pit

The theatrical world treats the actual orchestra pit as a physical setting in the story. The Conductor is always visible and in survival mode to the audience.

Spoilers: ~~Towards the climax, Eternity takes the Conductor's baton and stabs the Conductor to death. Then, the Timepipers murder the members of the orchestra, causing time to cease to exist.~~

CHOREOGRAPHY/PUPPETRY

The Timepipers require choreography or stylized puppetry to mimic the shorebirds' twitchy moves. Their spirit blends historical realism and absurdism.
